LOVE AND SUICIDE.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE OBSTRUCTED, ETC.

The village of Jeffersonville, New York was recently the scene of a sad occurrence, resulting in a lingering and terrible death. Helen Brand, a prepossessing and estimable young lady of about 19 years, daughter of Dr. William Brand, committed suicide on Wednesday.

The details of the affair partake somewhat of the romantic, and though there are several versions of the affair, the following is believed to be correct.

The young lady was engaged to a young man, who had been engaged in a great like, and urged every inducement to prevent them from keeping company together. After exhausting mild arguments, her father decided to use more forcible means, and accordingly locked her in one of the rooms of the house. This was on Wednesday morning. On the afternoon she released herself, and went direct to her father's drug store and took a sufficient quantity of corrosive sublimate to kill fifty persons. But, as though repenting this dreadful act, she rushed to her home and related to her mother what had occurred. Her father being absent from the house, her mother gave her the whites of several eggs, and sent for Dr. Robinson. The latter and her father returned in a short time, and administered emetics to the young lady. To avoid further trouble, and relieve yourself of this disease, take

FOR THE SPEEDY AND

SURE CURE

OF
FEVER AND AGUE

AND CHILLS AND FEVER.

Chills and Fever are caused from a certain poison existing in the atmosphere known as miasma. This poison is the result of the bad smells, the action of the different organs, and causes Illnessness. Consumption, etc., are in this way prepared to sustain any kind of fever, and may be fatal. To avoid further trouble, and relieve yourself of this disease, take

ENDER'S CHILL CURE.

It stimulates the organs to perform their different functions, and acts as an antidote to the poison which causes the Fever and Ague, and thereby cures the disease.

ENDER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

Will give strength and appetite, will destroy that feeling of weariness which hangs on tenaciously to the body when recovering from this disease. It is highly recommended for the cure of dyspepsia.

ENDER'S MONOMANIA.

About a century ago, an English army officer of good family, great wealth and brilliant prospects, committed suicide. He left behind him a note saying that "life had given him a headache, and that nothing could cure him but a good church yard sleep." We are reminded of this anecdote by a suicide which has just occurred in Natchez. One Mr. Delphaine, of Ohio, who shot himself, left this direction to the coroner: "You must find a verdict of suicide, for such is the case." There were also minute directions for the disposal of the effects of the deceased; but the peculiarity of the case is that there was no evidence whatever of alteration of mind. On the contrary, the note was signed in legible handwriting, so we are told, extraordinary good sense and judgment. A note which he left for the editor of one of the newspapers declared that "no one could tell why he killed himself,"—it was not for "love" it was not on account of "liquor" or "remorse and disappointment." He only said: "I have seen the world and am weary of it; that is about the truth." Add to this that he was a man of education, of good habits and good address, and we have all the essential features of the case. Such an incident as this is full of solemn warning. Such suicides are not uncommon, and the startling truth which they demonstrate is that strong desire for self-destruction is quite compatible with a healthy state of mind of the intellectual faculties. It makes but little difference whether we call the suicidal propensity a mania or a neurosis. The whole character of his victim, or it may be manfully and resolutely opposed with the whole force of a determined mind, until a healthier condition ensues, and the subject looks back with horror upon the period with which this self-indulgence enveloped him. A strong will is equally efficient in curing both physical and mental diseases.

REMEDY FOR POISONS.

If any poison is swallowed, drink instantly a half a glass of cold water, with a teaspoonful each of common salt and ground mustard stirred into it. This vomits as soon as it reaches the stomach. But for fear some of the poison may remain, swallow a cup of tea, or two cups, then drink a cup of strong coffee; these two being antidotes for a greater number of poisons than any other dozen articles known, with the advantage of their being always on hand; if not, a pint of sweet oil, lamp oil, drippings melted butter or lard, are good substitutes, especially if they vomit quickly.
